RECORD YOUR DEEDS

By an Act of Assembly of 1893, "All Deeds and Conveyances shall be recorded within ninety days after their execution, or shall be adjudged fraudulent and void against subsequent purchasers."

Also the Act of Assembly of 1909, prescribes a short form of Deeds, and "again requires the recording to make them valid."

It is also a great protection against loss or deed being burned by having them recorded, and costs but a small sum, compared to getting a new deed.

Bring or send them into the Recorder's office, and in a few days they will be returned to you.

THREE STATES TO ERECT MEMORIALS

Maine Authorizes Commission to Select Site for Monument to General Howard. Sedgwick Memorial. Virginia Monument.

The state of Maine will erect a magnificent equestrian statue of Major General O. O. Howard on the Gettysburg battlefield, a commission to select the site having been appointed by Governor Plaisted this week to act in conjunction with the National Park Commission in selecting a suitable site.

The sculptor is now working on the Virginia monument which is to be placed on West Confederate avenue a description of which has appeared in these columns. The memorial to the troops of the southern state is to be erected at a cost of $50,000 which amount was appropriated several years ago. The selection of the granite for the pedestal which is to be surmounted by an equestrian statue of General Robert E. Lee, has not yet been made but is now being considered. The sculptor F. William Elvelevs, has removed his office from New York to Richmond in order to be kept in touch with the Virginia commission while completing his work.

Connecticut has made a partial appropriation for the erection of a memorial to General Sedgwick and the site for that monument has also been selected. The state's appropriation is expected to be increased by substantial gifts from one or more private individuals and a sum warranting the erection of one of the most imposing equestrian statues on the field is in prospect.

The site for the Sedgwick monument will be in the open field north of Rosesteel's near the small house known as "The Headquarters of Sedgwick and Sykes." The National Park Commission expect to purchase this house and remove it, making the Sedgwick plot absolutely clear of everything except the monument. The open field was formerly a woods but the timber has been removed.

General Howard was a more or less frequent visitor to Gettysburg and came into special prominence here several years ago in connection with the state Sunday school convention. He was an ardent religious worker all of his life. He died within the past year and his native state and the one from which he was appointed at the time of the Civil War was quick to honor him by authorizing a commission to select a site for the erection of a suitable memorial. It is expected that before long the Maine commission will confer with the National Park Commission relative to this site.

FENCE JUMPING BRONCO

There comes an unusual story of a runaway horse from the South Mountain. The animal is owned by E. H. Bonebrake. It is a bronco bought from a carload of western horses and its fence jumping abilities rival those of the famous black buck of the Glen Fursey neighborhood. The bronco was left in a pasture field and one evening recently it jumped the fence and trotted off to Rouzerville. It was lost for several days.

The horse, when it left the Bonebrake place, two miles south of Waynesboro, ran across country to Rouzerville taking every fence with the ease and grace of a deer. Beyond Rouzerville it chose the Blue Mountain House road and ran on to Edgemont. At the latter place it started toward the mountain on the railroad, trotting unconcernedly in the center of the track.

It was caught by Richard Foms, Sunday morning, after a lively chase, being finally cornered in a farm yard.

The bronco is a wiry little black animal and only partially broken. It has been known to jump a nine rail fence, a height of more than seven feet.

IGNATIUS G. SMALL

Ignatius G. Small, a well known farmer and a director of the Farmers' Bank of McSherrytown, died at his home near Edgemoor, at noon Wednesday, after a two weeks' illness, from a complication of diseases, aged about 65 years.

He was twice married. His first wife, who was a Miss Devine, died about 17 years ago. Several years later, he was united in marriage to Miss Kate Neely, who survives him together with four sons and one daughter by the first wife.

The sons are Norbert, Raymond, Joseph and Kieran Small, and the daughter, Miss Mary Small, all at home.

Three brothers—W. H. Small, of Edgemoor; John Small, of McSherrytown, and Frank Small, of Gettysburg, and two sisters, Miss Jane Small, of Edgemoor, and Mrs. Ignatius Poist, of McSherrytown, also survive him.

BAND of Hope will hold the oratorical contest Friday evening at 8 o'clock in Bua Chapel. Mrs. Walters, the founder, will be present.

MAY ESTABLISH POSTAL SAVINGS

Inquiries Received by Postmaster Beales Indicate that Proposition of Establishing Postal Savings Bank here is Considered.

Gettysburg's postoffice may be made a postal savings bank.

Postmaster Beales has received from Postmaster General Hitchcock a list of inquiries as to the postoffice and the town.

He asks the amount of business done at the office during the past year; the international money orders sent for the year ending March 1, last; the percentage of foreign born population and the nationalities represented; the kind of manufacturing plants here and the number of workmen employed; the number of banks, and a query as to whether any of them are savings banks or whether other banks receive savings deposits.

The questions are concluded with one as to whether there is a demand for a postal savings bank here.

Postmaster Beales has replied to the inquiries of Postmaster General Hitchcock saying that there is a demand in Gettysburg for a postal savings institution. He gives the receipts of the Gettysburg office during the past year as $20,800.51. Twenty seven international money orders for a total of $470.02 were issued. The foreign born population of Gettysburg is given as about ten per cent of the total and is reported to consist of Russian Jews and Italians with a few Greeks and Germans.

The postmaster general announces that he is so much gratified with the reports from the forty five new postal savings banks opened May 1—when 400 new accounts were opened that he will establish between 50 and 100 depositaries monthly until the country is covered.

Riot in Jerusalem After the Excavations.
Jerusalem, Palestine, May 4.—The inhabitants have been aroused to the point of rioting by the operations of a party of English archaeologists who are accused of having excavated beneath the Inviolable Mosque of Omar and removed relics reputed to include the Ark of the Covenant, the Censer and other sacred relics which belong to the tribes of Israel.
Azmy Bey, the Turkish governor, was mobbed on the streets for supposed complicity in the profanation and hooted as "a pig." The mosque has been closed and is closely guarded pending the arrival from Constantinople of officials of the government who will make an investigation.
The expedition worked for two years on a large scale, beginning at the village of Siloam, which lies at the southeast end of Jerusalem, on the southern slope of the Mount of Olives, overlooking the Valley of Kedron and the Pool of Siloam.
The explorers are credited with having excavated a passage from the Pool of Siloam toward the place where once stood Solomon's Temple, built in 1012 B. C., pillaged and restored and finally destroyed by Titus A. D. 70.
Failing to reach the relics sought in this manner, the explorers, according to the alleged confessions of the guards of the mosque, bribed the guards, entered the mosque and after digging on six nights slipped away the treasures "the whereabouts of which," says an Arabic paper, "none know except God and these English."

The police now believe it was the result of some private feud. The two men killed are Gilmaro Palazolo and Giamco Imbostato. Antonio Russ' right leg was blown off.

TAFT SAYS NO MORE TERRITORY
Opens National Peace Congress at Baltimore.
MANY PROMINENT SPEAKERS

The President, Cardinal Gibbons and Andrew Carnegie Plead For World Peace.
Baltimore, Md., May 4.—President Taft, in his speech at the opening of the third National Peace Conference here declared that the United States would keep hands off and not seek to extend its domain or to acquire foreign territory.
The president made no mention specifically of Mexico, but to those who heard him it was evident that the troubled situation there and the suspicion in the South American republics as to the intention of this nation in regard to its southern neighbor had inspired him.
On the platform with the president were Cardinal Gibbons, Secretary of War Dickinson, Andrew Carnegie and United States Senator Gore, of Oklahoma.
The speakers who preceded Mr. Taft, Cardinal Gibbons and Hamilton Holt, of New York, president of the congress, voiced the opinion that the proposal for an arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain was the greatest step forward in the direction of universal peace that has ever been taken in the history of the world.
The president in his address expressed the belief that all who understand the situation were agreed that the proposed arbitration treaty would be a step in the direction of universal peace.
"We are dealing," he said, "with a world that is fallible. Reforms that are worth having are brought about little by little and not at one blow. I think that we will do better if we realize the difficulties there are to opening the gate of universal peace with one key and in one year."
The president declared he did not wish to discuss specifically the proposed treaty with England while it was still in the process of negotiation. But in the peace societies that exist throughout the country the president found a subject upon which he could talk without treading on ground that might be diplomatically dangerous. In the consolidation of the peace societies, the president thought, lay one means to the end for which they were all seeking.
This government, the president said, was hampered in any attempt it might make to bring peace to this hemisphere by the suspicions of the other nations on it.
U. S. Wants No More Territory.
"There isn't any desire for territorial aggrandizement in this country," said the president. "The people would not permit the government to take any territory if it would or to interfere except to aid those foreign governments and foreign people to maintain peace and order within their borders."
"We have had wars and we know the horrors and burdens they bring and would have none of them and need no more territory. But we have attained great prosperity and have been powerful in our community and therefore on us is the responsibility for peace in our neighborhood and the burden of helping the nations that cannot help themselves, if we can do it effectively."
"Oh, if England and America were to enter into an alliance of permanent arbitration with each other, such a bond of friendship and amity would be a blessing not only to these two great powers, but to all the nations of the civilized world."
Andrew Carnegie, who followed the president, was introduced as "the dreadnought of peace." He praised the president as the leader "who has laid the axe to the root of international war."
"To President Taft's appeal to the world, in which both his heart and head went forth, for the great nations to join his country in proving their sovereignty by agreeing to submit all disputes to peaceful settlement, behold there came such response across the sea from the other branch of our English-speaking race as had never been made to any appeal before. The leaders of parties in Britain sunk the partisan in the patriot, touched by the president's appeal. The nation was unanimous; all parties fused into one."
"Today the representatives of the two lands are forming the treaty, and here Britain knows nothing of party, for all parties co-operate, a sublime spectacle, proving that party issues fade in the presence of the high moral issue which leads nations to peace."
"Gentlemen, in an inspired moment our leader saw the great light. How, when, where, we know not. Probably the message came to him in a flash and he was guided he knew not how, but surely the angel of the lord appeared and entrusted to him the divine mission."

FATHER ACCUSED BY SON OF MURDER
Wealthy Farmer Says Killing Was Accidental.
Fowler, Ind., May 4.—John W. Poole, the wealthy Benton county farmer, accused by his son Emory of the murder of Joseph Kemper, a German employed on the farm, a year ago last December, admitted to Sheriff Frank Shackleton and Marshal John Bowman that he had killed Kemper, but that the killing was accidental.
Poole's statement caused great excitement in Fowler, which was secondary only to the stir produced by the finding of Kemper's body on the Poole farm.
Poole was arrested at one of his farms north of Rensselaer, where he had been for two weeks. On the way over from Rensselaer Poole was greatly excited and feared he would be mobbed when he arrived at Fowler. He lay in the corner of the automobile and concealed himself with a rug.
It was just before they arrived that Poole first told the sheriff and marshal that he was responsible for Kemper's death. He said that on the Sunday of the killing he was climbing over the fence at the back of his house with a shotgun in hand, being in pursuit of a rabbit running across the yard. Kemper, he says, was standing near. Poole declared that in getting over the fence the gun was discharged and the full charge from the gun blew off Kemper's head.

Jinks' Romance
A Civil War Vet's Tale
By F. A. MITCHEL
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.
"Jinks," said one of a party of civil war veterans to a comrade, whose bald head shot out a few spears of white hair and whose gums always met when he closed his jaws, "why didn't you never git married?"
Jinks uncrossed his legs, recrossed them the other way and said:
"There's a romance in my life."
"A romance! You don't mean to say there's any romance or ever has been in you! It wouldn't be nat'l to you."
"I wasn't always like I am now, no more'n you fellows. I was sleek enough when we was fighting Johnny Rebs."
"Well, tell us about your romance."
"It began when we was goin' up that long slant at Fredericksburg. If ever there was a place particularly calc'ated to mow down men and have plenty of time to do it, that inclined plane takes the cake. It's nearly fifty year since we was led up there, and nobody hain't yit found out who was responsible. Mr. Lincoln warn't no soldier, but if he'd seen he'd known it was a good slaughter pen and nothin' else."
"Me and Bob Aker was truddin' along side by side, expectin' either one or t'other would drop. We was bosom friends. All of a sudden Bob pitched forward. I dropped out and bent over him. He just had time before he fell on t'other side to stretch out a hand with a ring on it and say:
"Take it to Sue and tell her I want her to marry you instead of me."
"I pulled the ring off his finger, and he died while I was a doin' it. Slippin' the thing on my own finger, I got up and hurried along to my regiment, though even in this short time the place where we'd been was as wide as a church door."
"Bob had had plenty of time to tell me all that was necessary, for he'd told me the rest often before. Laws, how the boy did talk about that gal! She was the loveliest thing on earth, so good, so gentle, so lovin'. Then he would say: 'I nearly kills me to think that I may git killed down here and some other feller'll take my place with her. If any man does I want you to be her husband, Bill. If I knew she was goin' to you it wouldn't seem so bad.' He'd often showed me the ring she'd given him, and he'd given her one in exchange."
"I was powerful affected by all this, seein' Bob killed right beside me and his turnin' the gal he couldn't have himself over to me. I tell you I was all broke up."
"The old man took out his handkerchief, blew his nose and incidentally touched his eyes with the wipe.
"Oh, don't get muddin', Jinks!"
"I came out o' that slaughter all right, and as soon as I'd got Bob a trifle out o' my mind I fell to dreamin' o' his gal. I'd go over plans to break the news of Bob's message and all about it. I wondered if I could persuade her to take me instead o' Bob and how long I'd be a doin' it. There'd be lots o' delicacy required, and I didn't know how a rough chap like me could git down to it. The only thing I could do would be to do the best I could. I kind a tho't that a good deal depended on my gittin' the gal, for I had some hold on her—Bob had made the request—and I didn't have a hold on any other gal and no prospect o' havin' any other hold."
"The war ended at last, and I'd 'a' gone straight to Bob's gal, but I was mustered out far from her home, and I didn't have no money to buy a ticket with. Besides, I was out at the seat of the breeches. So I had to go to work to git the cash. O' course when I got a place I couldn't git my employer to let me go off courtin' a gal whose heart was like enough buried down in Virginia. Anyway, I didn't like to ask him, and so I kep' a-puttin' the thing off and puttin' it off till a number of years went by. All this time I was pluin' for the wife that I was expectin' to git."
"By gum, Jinks, you air givin' us a romance, ain't you?"
"It was ten years before I got round to goin' to give Bob Aker's message."
"I remember mighty well the day I went to the town she lived in, a village in a valley. I found the house, a little cottage with wisteria."
"Oh, cut out them embellishments."
"There was a man standin' on the corner, with his hands in his pockets, chawin' tobacco. I went up to him, and to open conversation I asked him for a chew. He give it to me, and then I asked if he knew Bob's gal. He said he'd known her ever since she was knee high to a duck. Then I told him that I was beside Bob Aker when he was killed and he had sent a ring and a message by me.
"What was the message?" the man asked.
"I kind o' wanted to get somebody to help me carry this load o' romance that was breakin' me down, so I showed him the ring and told him the hull story. He jist faced me and stood lookin' into my eyes, and I knew that somep'n was workin' in his mind."
"Young man," he said, impressive-like, "Bob Aker's girl married me a month before Bob was killed. If you want to give her the ring and relieve me I hain't no objection to your doin' it. You may have fought in the war, but you can't wrestle with her—no man can."
"For heaven's sake, Jinks, is that your romance?"
"He made it out of whole cloth. The reason he hain't got a wife is 'cause he couldn't git one."

PROTECT YOUR FIREWOOD.
Paying Proposition to Give Attention to Saving of Heat Units.
The condition of the farm wood supply is oftentimes not given due consideration. There is a right way in the matter and a wrong way. It is poor economy to burn green or poorly seasoned wood when a good article may be just as well had, says a correspondent of Orange Judd Farmer.
Firewood to contain the maximum heating qualities must be cut while the timber is green and the wood cells dormant, and cured under shelter. However, where one is utilizing the waste timber of the wood lot it is not always possible to cut the timber while in the best condition. There are the windfalls to work up and the young growth to thin, and it is not always convenient or possible to do this work at the proper time. This class of timber should be utilized, however, and will make a very satisfactory article if properly cured and preserved. Firewood exposed to the weather while curing loses much of its heating properties. Not only so, but such timber contains a certain per cent of moisture, and this must be driven off before the wood cells will burn. This process uses up a certain portion of the heat units generated by the burning wood. Scientific investigation has determined just what per cent of the heating properties of firewood may be used or dissipated in this way, but for practical purposes it should be sufficiently convincing that it pays to properly cure and preserve wood just to notice the difference in the manner in which the two kinds burn when placed in the stove.
I have had experience in the matter and am fully satisfied that properly curing and preserving the farm firewood supply is a paying proposition. We have no regular building for curing wood, merely protecting it with a board roof, yet this wood is far ahead of that which has had the full benefit of the copious rains and snowstorms.

Keep an account of every hour's time needed to prepare the ground, plant the seed, tend the crop and harvest the grain. To this add a reasonable amount for wear and tear of the machinery and the legal rate of interest upon the money invested in the land.
When the crop is harvested figure the number of bushels at the prevailing market. If the expense account exceeds the other, then set about to increase the productiveness of the land so that it will produce more the year following.

FIELD DAY FOR TRUST INQUIRIES

House Plans to Probe Steel, Sugar and Wool.

PROTEST BY SHOEMAKERS

They Tell Senate Committee That Machinery Trust Holds Them Helpless—Prosecution Suggested.

Washington, May 4.—Wednesday was trust investigation day in congress and its committees.

The resolution of Representative Stanley, of Kentucky, providing for the creation of a house committee of nine members to investigate the United States Steel corporation was favorably reported by the committee on rules.

Representative Hardwick, of Georgia, introduced a resolution calling for the investigation of the American Sugar Refining company.

A thorough inquiry into the scope and activity of the so-called wool trust is asked for in a resolution introduced by Representative Francis, of Ohio. All the inquiries have been started by Democrats.

The Stanley resolution to probe the steel trust originally contained a provision that all violations of anti-trust and other trade statutes should be investigated, but as agreed to the steel corporation was made the specific target.

The Stanley resolution specifically directs the committee to ascertain whether the steel corporation has relations or affiliations with the Pennsylvania Steel company, the Cambria Steel company, the Lackawanna Steel company or any other nominally independent steel company.

The committee is further directed to inquire into the relations of the corporation with the Pennsylvania Railroad company "or any other railroad company, coal companies, or with national banking companies, trust companies, insurance companies or other corporate organizations or companies."

Special inquiry is directed as to whether the business relations of the steel corporation with other concerns has resulted in violations by the latter of the anti-trust laws.

The committee is authorized to sit during the recess of congress, and the hearings may be continued throughout the summer.

Fifty or more concerns that are alleged to comprise the combinations are enumerated by name in the Francis resolution to probe the wool trust. The resolution provides that an inquiry shall be made by a committee of five to be named by the speaker, "for the purpose of ascertaining whether since the year 1898 there have occurred violations of the anti-trust acts and the interstate commerce law which have not been prosecuted to final judgment or lawfully disposed of by the executive officers of the government."

The resolution directs that the committee shall inquire into charges that the so-called "trust" exercises a control over the number of buyers of wool, that it restricts production and stifles competition, and that in other respects operates as a combination in restraint of trade and commerce. It is charged further that the woolen company is capitalized at a figure far beyond the actual amount of money invested in it and its affiliated companies.

SHOE MEN PROTEST

Against Alleged Discrimination of Machinery Company.

Washington, May 4.—Hearings accorded to boot and shoe manufacturers by the senate finance committee developed into a vigorous attack on the United Shoe Machinery company, of Boston.

The testimony was sensational and at times startling. Some of the members of the finance committee expressed the opinion after the meeting that the testimony if corroborated might raise a question as to whether there had not been a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Senator Bailey denounced the contracts which the shoe machinery company requires its customers to sign as invalid. "In some states such violation would be a violation of the state's criminal statutes," said Senator Bailey.

The witnesses were members of the Western Shoe Manufacturers' association. They came not only from New England, but from St. Louis, Chicago and Milwaukee. They declared they were practically at the mercy of the machinery company.

The principal witness was William D. O'Neil, of St. Louis. He asserted that the shoe manufacturing business had suffered because of the lowering of the duty in the Payne-Aldrich law from 25 per cent to 10 and 15 per cent. Importations, he declared, had greatly increased under the reduced duties, and he inquired what would be the effect if duties were entirely removed.

PEACE ENVOYS MEET TODAY

Expect to Quickly Reach an Agreement.

El Paso, Tex., May 4.—The actual meeting of the peace commissioners will take place today.

Judge Francisco Carbajal, Mexican commissioner, had a meeting with Francisco I. Madero, provisional president of Mexico; also with Madero's father and with General Navarro, commanding the Juarez federal troops.

Carbajal has fully satisfied the insurrectionist officials that he is clothed with full power to act finally for the Mexican government, and there will be no delay in getting down to business. He says he will act alone for his government, and that Governor Ahumada and Rafael Hernandez are to be his advisers in this event. Vasquez Gomez will act solely for the insurrectionists, advised by Pena Suarez and Francisco I. Madero, Sr.

Inasmuch as the armistice was only extended three days from noon Wednesday, the commissioners evidently believe that there will not be much trouble in coming to an agreement.

BURNED BEFORE FATHER

Child Perished In Flames In Field Before Parent.

Whiteside, Del., May 4.—While watching the burning off of a sedge field at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Baker, who live on a farm near here, Violet, a five-year-old girl, was burned to death.

Baker was watching the burning field, trying to keep the fire within the proper bounds, when the little girl attempted to run across to him. As she crossed the burning grass her clothing caught fire and as she ran, the flames and the wind fanned the flames and burned her severely before her father could get to her and slap the fire out.

The little girl was burned about the waist and legs and the father had his hands and arms scorched in trying to beat out the fire.

INDICT FIVE IN BOODLE PROBE

Ohio Legislators Accused of Soliciting Bribes.

ALL HELD IN HEAVY BAIL

Startling Confessions Involving Many Others, Said to Be in the Hands of Detectives.

Columbus, O., May 4.—As a result of two days' probing the Franklin county grand jury indicted five members of the Ohio general assembly for soliciting bribes.

One legislative attaché was indicted for aiding and abetting in the solicitation.

Although the names of four had been mentioned in the newspapers in advance, all five of them were in a lawyer's office when the grand jury reported. They immediately went to the court house and furnished bond.

Other features in the developments included the appointment of an entirely new steering committee in the legislature. The old one was depleted by resignations. Dr. George B. Nye, of Pike county, was the last to hand in his resignation. Tuesday six other members of the committee had deserted him, and when their resignations came up for consideration a motion was made to accept also that of Dr. Nye, although it had not been offered.

Nye, who Saturday caused the arrest of Burns' detectives on charges of bribing him, was among those indicted. His bond was placed at $10,000, as was also that of Sergeant-at-Arms R. J. Dyrege, of Erie county, alleged go-between. Dyrege, it was reported, was about to confess. He was sent for by Burns and spent considerable time at the court house, but later when asked if he had been promised immunity declared he had nothing to confess.

In addition to Nye one other representative was indicted, A. C. Lowrey, of Lawrence county, son-in-law of Colonel H. A. Marting, a rich manufacturer. Lowrey, like Nye, is a physician.

There were three senators indicted: George K. Cetone, of Montgomery county, a fruit grower; Isaac E. Huffman, of Butler county, a lawyer; L. R. Andrews, of Lawrence county, a lawyer. The bonds of all save Nye and Dyrege were fixed at $5000. Surety bonds were supplied.

Andrews and Lowrey, both from Lawrence county, are Republicans. The others are Democrats.

It is said that startling confessions involving many members of the legislature are in possession of W. J. Burns, head of the detective agency employed to uncover graft in the legislature. Burns has spent practically all of his time in examining witnesses who may be called before the grand jury.

It was learned that some of those implicated in the boodle disclosures were weakening and were now ready to tell Burns the truth about the corrupt practices.

County detectives are keeping a close watch on the implicated legislators to see that none of them attempt to leave the city. Immediate arrests may follow any such attempt.

The letter was written in 1521 during the reformer's return journey from the Diet of Worms, and, describing the proceedings, defended his attitude.

SAVES TIME AND WORK.

Separating Big Ones From Little Ones Is Job of This Potato Sorter.

The tedious labor involved in sorting many bushels of potatoes can be relieved with the device shown in the illustration and the amount of work done in half or a third of the time possible under the hand method. A frame is built to go over a large bin or bin. This is covered with one inch mesh chicken wire and set so that it slants upon the box or bin. The potatoes toes are placed upon this screen, and the small ones pass through the meshes into the box or bin below.

The larger potatoes roll down toward the lowest end of screen. Two men standing on each side of the device can pick out all the damaged potatoes as they roll down over same, thus securing perfectly sorted potatoes with but a fraction of the time, labor and expense required to sort them by hand. If the device is placed on a bin that is several feet from the ground an inclined surface should be placed at the foot of the screen so the tubers will not be bruised by dropping directly to the floor or ground.—Orange Judd Farmer.

The first cultivation of the corn following a thorough dragging a day or two before it comes up should be deep and just as close to the hill as one can get by going carefully and slowly. Later tillings should be more shallow and farther from the corn rows, as the roots of the plants develop and spread.

PROFIT BY OTHERS' EXPERIENCE

Gray Hair Restored
My hair was getting quite gray and falling out rapidly and I was troubled with a terrible itching of the scalp. My head was full of dandruff, which fell upon my clothes and kept me continually brushing it off. While on a visit to Rochester I heard of your Sage and Sulphur for the hair. I got a bottle and used it. A few applications relieved the itching, my hair stopped falling out and gradually came back to its natural color. It is now a nice dark brown color, soft, glossy and pliable. Several of my friends want to use it, and I want to know what you will charge me for six bottles of it.

Grew Hair on a Bald Head
For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is fairly covered and keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

CORN SILAGE FOR BEEF PRODUCTION.

The Indiana experiment station has done considerable work during recent years with the feeding of silage to beef cattle. In one test it was found that the corn brought 5 cents per bushel more when fed with silage and clover hay than when no silage was used. In a later test it was found that silage fed steers gained during a six months' period an average of thirty-nine pounds more per head than cattle of the same quality which were given no silage in the ration. It was also figured that the cost of gains was $1 per hundredweight less with silage than without.

In a third test made at the Indiana station, where four lots of steers each

Pure bred Herefords are second in numbers only to the Shorthorns, but they exist in the range country of the west in the greatest numbers and are comparatively scarce eastward. In weight Herefords almost equal Shorthorns. However, they are shorter of leg and have great width. Broad, blocky and deep, well rounded, with great chest capacity and having a vigorous constitution, Herefords are deservedly popular with western beef producers. On the other hand, their early maturity, uniformity of type and beefmaking ability make Herefords popular with cattle feeders in the corn belt and eastward.

were fed six months, it was found that the largest profits were made on a daily ration per steer consisting of corn, 15.8 pounds; cottonseed meal, 3 pounds, and silage, 25.5 pounds. On this ration the cost of producing 100 pounds of gain was $7.41 as compared with $8.98 for a similar lot of steers fed a daily ration consisting of corn, 17.4 pounds; cottonseed meal, 3 pounds, and clover hay, 9.5 pounds. While larger gains were made by making silage the only roughage fed, still the Indiana experimenters are of the opinion that it is best to feed some hay with silage. In one test at the Ohio experiment station it was shown that the feeding of silage reduced the cost of producing gains $1.17 per hundredweight, making the profits $5.97 per steer with silage and $3.99 per steer without silage.

While but comparatively few tests have been made throughout the country in which silage has been used for beef cattle, the results to date are favorable both as to daily gains, cost of gains and profits. There has been a prevailing notion that cattle which have been fattened by the use of silage would dress a lower percentage and that the beef would be more watery and less valuable on that account. But this does not seem to be true. Other things being equal, cattle which show the highest condition of flesh dress a higher percentage, and if the gains can be increased by the use of silage it is reasonable to expect a higher dressing.—Breeder's Gazette.

Weight of the Draft Horse.

With draft horses it is not a question of height, but of weight. Animal husbandmen at the Illinois station say that the nearer the ground the draft horse is the better both for service and endurance.

To be classed with draft horses an animal must weigh not less than 1,500 pounds and be good in flesh. He is all the more valuable if he weighs 1,800 to 2,000. He cannot be too heavy if his bone corresponds with his weight. He should be blocky, made with heavy bone, though smooth; short in the back, close coupled, with heavy loin; rounded hips, wide, strong hock, flat bone, moderately short pasterns, medium straight shoulders, heavy in front with full breast, with legs well apart, though not extremely wide. The animal should carry a good covering of flesh, be smooth finished all over and manifest a gentle disposition. Accordingly he should show a mild, bright eye, erect ear and a smooth, easy action at the trot. Because it is easier to secure weight in fat than bone care should be taken to insure heavy bone in extreme weights, but this should not be done at the expense of fair finish.

Pasture the Pigs.

The pig that has been supplied with an abundance of pasture and a small grain ration during the summer should weigh from 150 to 175 pounds by the latter part of September. A short period of heavy feeding will finish them for market at 200 to 275 pounds in weight. Pork grown in this way will yield far more profit than where the process is struck out longer and the hogs are finished to heavier weights. The cheapest gains are always made while the pig is young. It is poor policy to starve and stunt a pig during the first few months, expecting to make it up by heavy feeding later. The 100 pound pig makes gains 20 per cent cheaper than the 200 pound pig if equally thrifty.—Live Stock Reporter.

BORROWING A BOAT.

Mark Twain's Story of a Badly Bewildered Mariner.

When Mark Twain rediscovered his old Missouri playground in Hannibal thirty years after he had left it he had become famous as a writer, and all the old boys turned out to do him honor. On that occasion the humorist told this story of an incident that occurred in his boyhood days:

"Bad as they have made me out since I left here, I want to say that I never stole anything, no matter how many scrapes I got into. I expect the reason you folks have been slandering my memory during my absence is because of this part of my boyhood history. One day a crowd of us boys wanted to go down to the island to play buccaneers or something like that. It was necessary to have a boat. There were all sorts of skiffs along the river front, but we were too honest to borrow any of them. You see, they were chained to stakes and padlocked.

HE CAME STAGGERING DOWN.

While looking around we observed a mariner coming down the river in a low, rakish yawl of the kind pirates used. He tied to a stake and went up in town for a load of bilge water. We could easily have taken his boat without his knowing a thing about it, but we were not that sort.

"So we went into a boathouse where were stored some brushes and a can of bright red paint. Inside of ten minutes we had that yawl looking like a fiery sea serpent. We hid behind a pile of lumber to await the mariner. Pretty soon he came staggering down, and when he saw that red boat there he sat on the bank and mopped his forehead. We could hear him mumbling as he tried to figure it out.

"Then he zigzagged back to town, and we boys, with quiet consciences, seized that flaming craft and had a good time down on the island."—Edgar White in Philadelphia Ledger.

Cleverly Parried.

John Van Buren, son of Martin Van Buren, at one time generally known as Prince John, having undertaken the representation as a lawyer of a certain cause before the courts, very much to the disgust of one of his friends, the latter expostulated with him in vain and, losing his temper, exclaimed: "Van Buren, is there a case so low, so vile, so filthy, that you would decline to represent it?"

"I do not know," Van Buren replied hesitatingly, and, quickly approaching his ear close to the lips of the inquirer, he whispered, "What have you been doing?"—Hilton in "Funny Side of Politics."

A Lucky Number.

One day there was an amusing incident in the gambling rooms at Monte Carlo. An Englishman arrived early and, sitting down, crossed his legs and stuck one foot out in an attitude of ease. Suddenly there was a wild rush of everybody to the tables, and Italian barons, Spanish countesses and Russian princesses fought with each other to get their gold and silver pieces on to 17. The croupiers stared, the inspectors looked nervous, and when 17 came up the entire staff seemed petrified. What had happened? Had the wheel been got at? Had some clever trick been played? Why had everybody rushed to back 17?

The croupiers looked about and saw every eye directed at the Englishman, who, finding himself the object of so much attention, blushed violently and burst into a profuse perspiration. Then a roar of laughter went round the room, and the croupiers and the inspectors and even the solemn attendants in livery joined in it.

The mystery was explained. On the sole of the Englishman's boot was the number 17 in chalk—"Dagonet Abroad."

Ready For Her Ladyship.

Lady Constance Mackenzie, the English traveler and beauty, once made a long trip through Texas. At one place a wealthy ranch owner invited her to visit him, and she accepted the invitation. The owner of the ranch was determined to give his guest a fitting reception, so he telegraphed his manager, "Lady Mackenzie coming tomorrow: make every preparation to treat her royally." The manager had never heard of Lady Mackenzie, but as the business of the ranch was raising blooded horses as well as cattle he decided this must be some fancy race horse. The famous guest arrived the next day with her party and found all ready. A clean box stall, with abundance of fresh hay, awaited her.
